"Excellent course. I was totally naïve regarding the whole thing despite having years of experience in working on front line with domestic abuse survivors. It has really opened my eyes to other cultures and women's experiences."
- Training attendee

These training courses are suitable for staff from many different sectors and organisations including, but not limited to, health, police, probation, education, legal, charity and VCSE, adult and children's social care, and housing, who may come into contact with Black and minoritised victims and survivors of domestic and sexual abuse and / or children living in families where domestic abuse is occurring.

TELL ME MORE ABOUT HALO PROJECT

The Halo Project is an award-winning national charity that supports Black and minoritised victims and survivors of domestic abuse, sexual violence and hidden harms; specialising in cases of forced marriage (FM), female genital mutilation (FGM), and honour-based abuse (HBA).

"It was one of the most important and in-depth training courses I have ever done. Thank you, Halo's expertise and knowledge is amazing and it was delivered brilliantly."
- Training attendee

In a decade, the charity has provided specialist support to more than 2500 women, many with children, and empowered them to live free from harm through one-to-one tailored support to suit each victim's specific needs and trauma-informed training and recovery programmes. Halo Project's expert staff have also trained hundreds of frontline professionals on hidden harms and how to safeguard those at risk.

Evidence shows that those best placed to train frontline practitioners are specialist support services, as they have a greater knowledge of the behaviours involved and the cultural awareness in understanding specific needs (Baillot et al., 2014).
