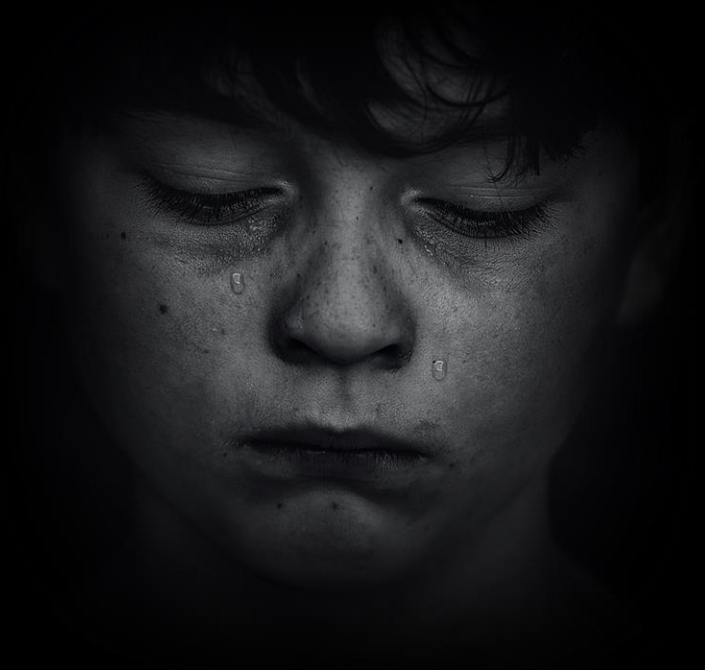
What Ifs…

What if Peterson experienced trauma or abuse as a child?

What if Peterson was sexually abused by a nanny, baby-sitter, family friend or family member?

What if Peterson's parents were not able to keep him safe?

What if Peterson struggled with feelings of injustice and being a victim?



Peterson's presentation

Presenting himself as victim - contacting support agencies

Playing games – "Find the evidence and I will talk"

Retaining right to silence whilst disclosing outside of police.

.Minimising - "I am a male nanny I will get allegations"

Normalising – "I am gentle with the children"

What went well

Cross border working - with lead LADO co-ordinating the professional group

Timeliness - from all agencies resulting in charges for 19 offences within one month

Complex strategy discussion – pulling together information, professionals and actions

Learning – sharing this case study within the partnership forum has led to identified learning points being taken forward across agencies, such as SPOC for student placements within health, education and social care settings.

Practice dilemmas

Information sharing
- process driven
- silo working with new referrals

Voice of the child vs Voice of the parent
- SARC engagement

Lack of professional curiosity:
Learning identified – occasions when professional curiosity could have led to earlier interventions

Professional challenge:
Does not meet criminal threshold - more discussion over drugging of children with hot chocolate- police stating cannot prove so no investigation.

Sentencing

Peterson pleaded guilty to twenty offences, which were all of a sexual nature and received a very lengthy custodial sentence.

He will be a registered sex offender for life and was given a Sexual Harm Prevention Order (SHPO) to last until further court notice, severely restricting his access to children and digital devices.

It was noted that Peterson’s offences were horrendous breaches of trust, and every parent's worst nightmare. He had no previous convictions or any other DBS-related record, and the parents had all found him through reputable child care agencies.
